17.	Exp.	The poet's grandmother loved to climb trees. While she started climbing trees, she was six years. Her brother had taught her how to climb a tree. Even at her old age, she used to climb trees. Others wanted her to live gracefully, but she wanted to live disgracefully. She would laugh and say that she would be on the trees in the garden. One day when she climbed the tree, she was struck and could not come down. Then she was rescued with great difficulty. The doctor advised her to be on the bed for a week. The moment she felt strange and demanded a house on the tree top. She got it and lived like a queen in her old age. Often the poet also enjoyed there with her drinking sherry. OR The poet describes the old Jazz player and how he is transformed when plays the music he loves. The Jazz player has a rough unshaven face and sagging stomach. He wears a faded blue shirt, a loose necktie and an old jacket. His shoes are run down. Across his chest is an old alto saxophone supported from his neck by wire coat hanger. The Jazz player at first has a weary expression on his face. He keeps his head down and lifeless. When it is his turn to play, he lifts the saxophone to lips. Suddenly, he is filled with a new life. He is no longer a helpless old man, there is power in his music which draws people to listen. The people says that now he is no longer an ordinary man. He is like a bird flying higher and higher, totally lost in the beautiful music he produced.	2	2	4
